Hi Deltora people,

This is John Dove, I have been battling the government for a few years now without luck. The Roile River Delta is massively contaminated because of the fossil fuel extraction. The government doesn't seem to care and lets the major companies, such as Petroil Inc., continue with the extraction. Species, especially the birds that I study, which are protected, seem to become extinct and in general the population is diminishing in the area.

I have, for several times, asked the government to give insight in the finances. It is not clear where the proceeds are going to. Clearly not into the environment, even though the delta is UNESCO-protected.

Since I am not getting answers I feel like something illegal is going on. Is Deltora willing to help me get to the bottom of this?

Best,

John Doe

Dear people of Deltora,

I think I have valuable information for you.

I am an activist in Petronia and have been battling the government for a few years now. I have come to the conclusion that they must be hiding something regarding the extraction of raw materials in the Roile river delta since they haven't responded to any of my inquiries.

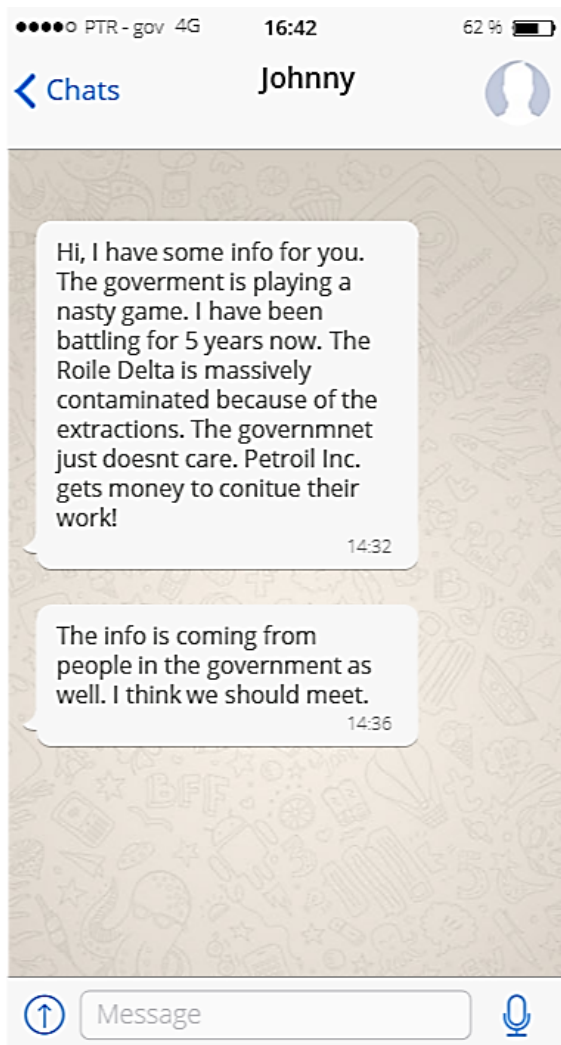

The Roile river delta is a unique piece of land and there are many birds nestling there. These birds are getting less and less places to breed. Also, besides the environmental consequences, the extraction isn't bringing any wealth to the people living in this area. I have asked questions regarding money flow, but no response whatsoever.

I am kindly asking for the help of Deltora. Are you willing look into this issue? I have tried and failed, but maybe that a renowned magazine as Deltora could get answers.

Sincerest,

John Dove

I have been battling the government since 5 years. The delta is completely contaminated because of the oil extraction. The government doesn't seem to care and Petroll Inc. just continues their work.

Now, I've heard there is a nasty game going on, involving bribes. There's proof!
